Survival, sacrifice and struggle (is a program) which is really deep, deep, deep-rooted and is very old. Other than fear, that was one of the first tamperings/modifications to the human program before we experienced separation. It's a deep-rooted one and one which, in my experience...we're back to the layers of the onion where you clear a level and then you find some older stuff, and you clear that out, and so on.

But it doesn't mean that you are forever and a day stuck doing these clearings; that's not what the point is. The point is that as you do a clearing, go on and experience and notice how you feel different. And then when you get to a point where you feel, "Oh, this is now affecting me more. Wow! I didn't realize that." Then I would recommend we do a clearing.

These clearings are here to empower you, so use them. They are not, in any way, shape or form, to ever get you dependent on us or feel that you can't do it without us.

As you do more and more of these clearings, you are also rewiring a patterning in your mind. Because clearing is something that we were actually designed to do.

Ego is what retains and holds on to things and keeps us locked into sequences and paths. And once you keep repeating these clearings, it's sort of like you are creating new...or not creating new, but rather, re-firing neuropathways in the brain that assist you to clear better, to see things better, and to remain at a neutral state. These are all pathways that are in the brain and they have just gone dormant because you have forgotten that they are there.

But as you avail yourself of the clearings which we offer and you listen to them repeatedly, you are re-firing those neuropathways, you are assisting the brain and the emotions to kind of go, "Oh, yeah. When I experience this emotion it doesn't mean that I'm in a heightened state of survival. I can experience it and just observe it."

And that's where power comes. Because then you can choose how it is that you are going to interact with that emotion versus having that emotion forcing your interaction.

Well said! Well said. Exactly.

And the thing is with this topic, by giving us time as we go along we see how much changes occur. Because every day is changing and there are new things that develop in the energetic patterns and also in what people many have been struggling with there or four weeks ago may have changed down the line. So it's always best to see what is the most current and what is the most helpful.

And like you were saying with the clearing processes too...so you do a clearing process and, depending on the state that you're in and depending on what you still require through your journey...because, again, this is an opportunity and we are creating what we are experiencing for learning. Sometimes we do a clearing process that we may think, at the mind level, we are ready to do fully, 100%, and all we're going to be able to do is remove only a few layers of it, allowing other things to be exposed so we can address other things.

So this is the beauty of all these clearings: it is not a one-time thing. And there will be a few people who will do it once and it's completely cleared and they don't need to play with it anymore. But, in most cases, what happens is that you are going to remove different layers and you're going to, say, address something that is automatically responding and automatically been coming up, for example in a relationship, and it clears up on that aspect of it. But there's other aspects that may still have not been addressed and won't be addressed because you are not ready for it because there are other things that need to be addressed and still learning to be achieved from other experiences.

Because remember the soul would love to clear every aspect of it, but it also has a list of things that it wants to learn from and experience and wrap up. So, along the way, there are certain things that it will hold onto and not allow to clear right away because it needs to wrap up other things or wrap up other learning and experiences it chooses. And that particular aspect of the program that may be coming up is maybe instrumental in assisting other aspects of it.

Sometimes people say, "Well I've done that and it's not gone. Why do I still have it? Is it not working?" and so forth. No, it is working. And you removed what you were ready to remove and the rest of it is still necessary for the time being while other things are being exposed because they are all interconnected in one way or another. And as that comes up to the surface, and you address those other parts, then you will be more ready to remove.

Because I have seen others who have done clearings and then when they do it even a month or two later, or whatever time afterwards, they say, "Wow, it was much more effective this time!" They just repeated the same program but energetically they have now achieved a certain frequency that is prepared for it, and they've wrapped up other things that they needed to learn and needed to experience and clear up before they could actually go even deeper.

So it's not like we open all the doors all at once. We open several doors, we step into it, discover what's there to play with and then, once that is done, we are ready to move onto the next door, and so forth.

Now, this is not a bottomless pit. It's not a situation where it is on-going for life. No, it isn't. In actual fact, this may have been true for a long time in all our lives before. But right now we are doing such huge progress in wrapping up that has never been achieved in multitudes and multitudes of lifetimes. And we are doing it not only in one lifetime, we are doing it in months, weeks, days and sometimes years...where it used to take several lifetimes (or even more) to achieve the levels that we are achieving now.

So there is a massive amount of opportunity for growth because the energy is facilitating and there is an awakening process that is happening around us. And that means that other souls are achieving more levels of clarity, achieving more accessibility and they are radiating frequencies and they are also uploading new states of consciousness into the collective (which we are all sharing), so it is creating even more openings and accelerating things more quickly.

So it's amazing how we are facilitating one another through this whole process. What we are achieving right now has never been achievable before. And we are just playing with this now because things are speeding up even more. And I don't mean challenges, time and everything else. It's just the capability of going into that fluid state, we experience, and then we step out of it. It's not about any more attachments.

Because before, whatever we created as an experience (and you can probably attest to this as you see your life)...whatever we took on as an experience no matter what it was (relationship-wise or any other experiences, careers, or anything else), we would learn it or experience it and then we would get attached to it. We would define ourselves by it and we would hold onto it and repeat it over and over again in our mind and in our experience and "I am this way because of (this, this and this)." And, when we look at it, this, this and this was just a series of experiences.

But right now the way things are going for many people...and now more and more are also stepping into that...is that we have a certain experience but we don't identify with the experience. You had the experience, you take the learning from it, you take what you need to grow from it and then..."Next!". You move on and you let it go. It's not something you attach to. It's not something that we use to define ourselves to the same degree.

I'm not saying that across the board it's the same for everybody. Everybody is going to be achieving that, and everybody is at different levels of capability of doing so, but everybody is exactly where they need to be to achieve that aspect of it. And that's what's really occurring now.

And this subject (survival, sacrifice and struggle mode), when we were talking about survival, that was a HUGE one because with the shift (and I'm sure you have noticed it, Antonia, and I see it with people coming in, and even when we started talking more about it not just with us but with others too), one of the key things that kept coming up was the fact that with change and the shift that's going on, what we would be experiencing (not only in our emotional realm but in our world in the sense having a lot of the structures coming down and a lot of the, you know, what we identified ourselves with in the material world, in our stature, in our education, in our experience of connections between family members, and so forth) starts to shift and we start not having that as a "foundation" any longer, the first thing that kept coming up was survival.

And if you remember, Antonia, the (event) we did a couple of years ago, one of the key things that kept coming up when we were talking about the shift is that, "Oh my God, we need to hoard. We need to do (this or that)," and automatically survival comes in.

Survival is huge. HUGE! And it is, like you were saying before, deeply ingrained. This was a modification that was done 10,000 years ago. And survival is just a branch sister of fear. And it is not our natural state...never has been...but it has been taken and utilized as something which is the foundation of our human experience.

And the same thing with sacrifice and struggle...when you look at the depth of it...the fact is that survival requires struggle. If we want to survive, it requires struggle. It requires hard work. It requires conniving or what you would call...we have to use our creativity...but not creativity of fluidity or creativity of experience, creativity of density and energies. That is a polarity, yes, and it has served and it has assisted in that respect because it gave us the opportunity to experience the opposite of Who We Truly Are. Which is great when we look at it that way. But, and we've talked about it many times before, we're now done with this and it needs to be let go.

Now survival is still a huge, huge, HUGE obstacle when it comes to allowing shifts to happen. Because when things start to change, survival mode comes into play automatically because we are so programmed with it inside/out.

Even coming onto the planet, the first thing that, you know...the whole process that we've stepped into being born and in a lot of parts of the world the first modality is that the baby comes out of the mother, the cord is cut, the baby is spanked, and now they are automatically going into a state of panic because they have to take their first breath because all their life force has been cut off and, "If I don't do it now, I'm toast." And that automatically activates...it's already in the genetic encodement, but now we've just activated it in that experience. And then we go on further as we're growing up and the first thing we're talking about with our children...with any children...is, again, all survival based. Again, we need to be better, we need to do this, we need to do that, and so forth, and we have to be careful of this, and know enough of that, and so forth. And we program that we have to get a good education, we have to work hard and do this and that so you can survive, so you can have a roof over your head, so you can have food, so you can actually have any form of life. And it's all enforced with "survival."

And then as we create and activate "fear" more, again, it's all interconnected and we see how ingrained and deep that it goes in. And because it has been around for 10,000 years you see how deeply it has been carried in the genetic code. And it's been carried over from generation to generation to generation.

And when you look at the collective consciousness and you look at the soul itself, how many lifetimes has it been playing through the survival mode? And all of these imprints are in there, so ingrained. And that's the part we are requiring to dissolve.

And then if you look at the Akashic records which is something that is dissolving, yes, but in many cases we are still linked to it in the sense that we are still relying on it. The Akashic records is basically a record of all the experiences we've had. And the same thing with our soul because our soul is connected to that and has its own records. But the Akashic records is a record of the sharing that's been done. Because of the shift which is happening in the universal state, that will no longer be required. But we are still playing with it. But there is so much of it ingrained in the mode of sacrifice, survival and struggle. And those modes are very, very powerful.

And to facilitate...and this is why we are doing this process this evening, is to facilitate for us to move even further to dissolve that. We need to understand that it is not our natural state, it has never been our natural state and it has been an obstacle because it is all fear based.

And if you look at it with anything that's been going on, with any experience, what is the biggest thing that comes up all the time? It is always about survival. Survival of the fittest. Even in the world of sports and so forth, "If I don't get the scores or if I don't do this I won't have another opportunity to play." Or the fact that even in the work world, the whole thing is about survival. "I need to hold on to this job because if I don't have it I won't have food, or a home, and I won't be able to keep what I have." Or that, "I need to play a specific role and I can't deviate from it because if I don't have this in my life then what do I have and where do I move on?"

And so it is ingrained at all levels. It is very, very powerful in that respect.

And the interesting thing about it, when you really look at the foundation of it, besides it being the shift and letting go...because that's what a big part of the shift is about: letting go of old modalities, letting go of the world that we've projected and experienced thus far. And it's not about letting go because there was anything "wrong" with that...again, it's letting go because we are ready for a change, we are ready for flourishing in our Essence and to really experience completely freely.

But that keeps bringing up the whole thing about, "Am I really going to survive? Am I going to be able to do this and have this shift occur within myself?"

And one of the things that comes up is, "If I can't make the changes fast enough, what's going to happen? I'm not going to be around!" And, again, what is that? It is fear and survival all inter-connected and how the two modes come together.

So the shift has been activating that, specifically when we are going through changes where we may lose a job or in the sense where we need to make changes within our lives. And that may mean that I need to let go of a specific relationship or I need to let go of a certain pattern, and so forth. And, automatically, this old archaic program kicks in right away: survival. Which creates fear and which is a huge obstacle.

It's almost like we are ready to walk, we are ready to run, we are ready to experience, we are ready to just really fly and then that kicks in. And once it kicks in, automatically what happens? It's like somebody just trimmed our wings or somebody has just bolted our feet to the ground because suddenly it makes us completely paralyzed. Fear and survival are huge paralyzers in that respect.

And when you look at it even further, when you are playing with survival itself, it disregards the "whole." Because survival is about "self"; it's not about the "whole." Because once we are connected to the "whole" (meaning connected to the whole planet...connected to everybody), survival doesn't exist. Because in our original design we never had that as part of our experience because there was no such thing. There was no need to look at survival.

Here we are, this beautiful Divine Being in a human physicality on a playground which has been designed to nurture and support whatever experience that we chose to have. It has all the sustenance, all the components, all the energies, all the beautiful levels of experiences that was available for us to play with. And there was no question as to, "Am I going to be able to stay here, experience this, and survive?" None of that existed. That was not even in anything that any part of us would contemplate. It was like, "I'm here. I'm here to play and let's play. Let's experience." And that has been....that IS our natural design.

Right from the beginning there was nothing of that nature. There was no such thing as sacrifice. And if you look at that one too, it's also huge...because we need to sacrifice in order to have what we want. There was none of that or anything of that nature. Because before the programming was changed, before we created this "separation" where we were disconnected from the "whole," we were here all together playing...with no sense of responsibility for one another or anything of that nature...we were just supporting each other by just being ourselves. By allowing that everything was shared...everything was playful. There was nothing where anybody would say, "This is mine and nobody else can touch it. If anybody wants it, they will have to pay for it so that I can have another form of sustenance that will replace that form of sustenance." There was none of that. None of that existed.

Whatever we were experiencing at that time was the fact that nobody could even contemplate that, "This is mine and that's yours." It was a playground which would host every single soul that came here. Every single soul was free to experience every aspect of whatever was here.

And everything supported each other. And that was the perfect design of that. The beauty of it was not to come here to experience that type of polarity. We did have a polarity in the sense that we could play and experience but we were still in a sense where we did not play with any of those modalities.

And then what happens with survival, when it kicks in, we disconnect from others, and, of course, then it becomes struggle, then it becomes sacrifice. Because then, all of a sudden, it's like, "I'm annihilated here and now everything's competing for something and it's not complementing one another." And then, of course, what happens? Then we start to play with that.

But that was a deviation that was created to accentuate not only the separation...which is illusionary because it doesn't really exist and never existed...we just created it within the mind program...and that was part of the beautiful dance we created...we created an "illusion" of things. Because when you really look at the bigger scheme of things and can see it with clear eyes, that illusion doesn't even exist. And especially with people who are awakening and children who are coming along, to them the "survival" thing, the "sacrifice," and struggle (that we need to work, we need to do this)...they don't even comprehend it at all. And to see the fact that, you know, here we are, we are an island unto ourselves within this beautiful dance and we're here to defend ourselves and to struggle against everything so that we can survive against all odds, when actually everything that is there is designed for us to flourish. It's completely different.

So when you really look at it, in the aspect of what was really playing out, there was this disconnect. And that's the reason why this Oneness consciousness that's coming in will dissolve this disconnect...will dissolve the illusion of disconnect...will dissolve the separation aspect of it so we can actually "see" each other as One, and you see the shift in survival, sacrifice, struggle and any other challenges that we've played in the real duality and polarized experiences that we've had, will dissolve. Because then we're here to complement one another, we're here to play all together as playmates.

Because when we are in that state we are all playing with one another. And we are all facilitating one another. Not in the sense of responsibility that, "I need to be responsible for somebody," or, "I need to care for somebody," or, "I need to play with any of that stuff that we've played with before." It's just about each one complementing each other because each one has a beautiful gift that they share, but they will always share it in a natural state without accountability or, "You need to do this and I need to do that," and so forth. None of that will exist.

None of that is our natural state and that's what we are going back to...our natural state...as all of this is dissolving. And to even play with it now because we could do a whole seminar on this (of course!) but we are just creating the playground here...or the foundation to play with...with part of this, when we look at the "sacrifice" part, how many of us are carrying within our encodement that love is about sacrifice? About sacrificing ourselves for others, and that is love? How many of us carry that within us? And the fact that if you have children, that equals sacrifice? We have to sacrifice our life for our children. We have to sacrifice ourselves for others because of love. When, realistically, that is not so. It is not our natural state.

Love is unconditional. Love is a beautiful dance. It is the creative aspect of that dance. It is the Pure Potentiality of that dance.

So loving someone does not equal sacrifice. It never did.

The thing is...even when we take a look at the aspect of a child coming into our life...why do we have children? Do we have children because we are obligated to have children? And once we have the children in our life, we now have to sacrifice our life for our children.

When you can really look at the truth behind it and say, "OK. I desire to have the experience of playing (Mom or Dad). I choose to have an experience of having a child come into my life that will present me with the opportunity to have experiences that I choose to experience with them. They will bring me a level of clarity and opportunity to learn from and I, equally, give them the opportunity to experience life through me and to learn with me, and to share with one another, and to allow each one of us to be fully Who We Truly Are with the great gifts that we have to offer to each other. "

When you really look at the truth, the child comes into your life because it chose to come into your life. You have this child coming through you because you've agreed to have that child because that child has something to offer to you, just as you have something to offer to the child. It is a mutual dance, it is a mutual agreement. But at no point has there been any sacrifice attached to it, any obligation, any responsibility attached to it...at all. This has all been created through all these modalities that we've played with.

And this is where we are realizing that, in a sense, this is the part that needs to dissolve.

Because look at these spirits. If you observe: you have a child in your life, and if you're playing in sacrifice mode, struggle mode, survival mode, fear mode, how much do you experience the beauty of this child in your life? And the beauty of the opportunity to play with one another, to learn from one another, and to accentuate the grandness that we are in one another?

When we are concerned with what education they are going to have, if they are going to be safe, are they going to make it to the bus on time, or are they going to do this, or are we concerned that they have enough food or getting enough exposure...and all of this stuff...and we are paranoid and everything under the sun...how much of that True Essence are we experiencing while we are playing with all of that? You see, it isn't. And then we say, "That's love." "That's what life is about." You love somebody, you struggle for them, you sacrifice for them, and you need to protect them...and that is love.

But that's not love at all. That is a perception of love that's been created...and we're coming to that realization. Because true love is to allow each soul to be themselves 100% and you accentuate and play with one another with complete fluidity and opportunity for each one to be a grander aspect of each other. Because each one is equal.

Because if you look at it, you could say, "Well, here comes this child, and this child is innocent." How many times have we noticed that we have a child come into our life and that child is absolutely amazingly brilliant, and is more advanced than we are? Because, remember, that child is only a small package, which means that's it's a vehicle that has taken on and it's a small package. But that soul is eons old....meaning that it's been around a long time and has had many, many multitudes of lives. And many times they are much more "enlightened" than the person they are coming through.

So you look at it and say, "Well, OK. Let this enlightened soul (no matter the size of the package) be part of my experience so that I can learn from it." So learn from it. Because they are in your life so you can learn...the same way you are in their life so they can learn...whatever they need to learn.

Because, remember, whatever level of enlightenment they may be at, there is always something they need to achieve, just as you have things you need to achieve in the learning aspect at the soul level. When you can see the beauty of all of that, then all this sense of responsibility, obligation, all these fears, all these sacrifices, all these struggles start to dissolve. All of it starts to dissolve.

You hear from parents, "I sacrificed my life for you. I've given the best years of every part of my life so that you could have a life...because I did not have a life...butd

I did everything under the sun to do that.” But whose choice was it to take that path? And I’m not saying that there’s anything wrong with it. I’m not saying that was a choice that was poorly made. The choice was the choice. The experience was the experience.

But where are we today? We are much more conscious and we are becoming more conscious where we can see, “OK, I don’t need to play with that any longer. This is something that has been archaic.”

Because, if you look at it, all of the stuff that we’ve been talking about is thousands and thousands of years old. They are modalities that we’ve adopted to have whatever experience we’ve gone through that we are now clearing.

And the fact that we are now awakening...and this is another thing that keeps coming up (and we’ll play with that too in a minute)...the fact that as we become more aware, as we start to awaken, we start saying, “OK, we are becoming more ‘spiritual’, that means that now I need to give up my life. I have to give up my stuff. I have to give up living life to a certain level.” Yes, of course as we awaken, we have fewer polarized states where we are not playing with either starvation or luxury. Instead, we are going to have a more beautiful blend between the two and we’re not going to have part of that...but it’s not here to say, “Well, I now have to give up everything in my life.”

It’s about have a different level of appreciation for whatever we have in our life and utilizing it to see if it actually does enhance our experience, if it does (in some way) provide something for us,. Or are we creating an illusion about opulence or survival or the fact that I’m in a good position and I need to have all this stuff to identify with, all this stuff to quantify and qualify my existence, my success, or whatever we attach to.

The awakening process is coming to a different appreciation to say, “OK, what do I really need to play with and, at the same time, does not, in any way, shape or form, restrict my freedom? Restrict me from being fluid and being moment by moment?” And it’s looking at that.

And so it’s not about “giving up” (things) because I am now spiritual and I have to be in poverty and not have anything. The thing is, you become aware and awakened and you can now discern, “What do I really need and don’t need?” “What do I need to identify with or don’t?”

As you awaken more, you don’t need to identify with anything. You are basically You, the Pure Potentiality that is You, each moment creating whatever experience you want to play with, but you don’t identify yourself with anything or anyone. So you are completely free in that respect.

So the whole thing about giving up things or losing things or the fact that we go into a situation and we start to become aware and awaken and we start making new choices, and all of a sudden now we can't make enough money for whatever we need...and all of that stuff. And as we're going through it then, of course, we go back into survival mode.

But the point is, that is an old modality. And the reason you are stepping into that is to show you that is still in place, but now you need to let it go.

Because at lot of times we get attached to all these things that we need to hold on to because...once we let it go...How many times have we seen that we have held onto things so dearly and so deeply that it's, "Oh my God, if he leaves me...", or "If this relationship breaks..." or "If I lose this job," or "If I lose this stuff (or something) my world's going to fall apart and I'll be ready to jump out of a window of a tall building," (or something of that nature). But then, once it's happened, we come to realize that, "Wow, I can breathe better, I feel lighter, I can be more free now. I don't carry the burden, I don't carry the responsibility, I don't carry all that heaviness I carried before."

And the heaviness is not even about the stuff, it's about the attachments we've created to the stuff, the stories we've created to the stuff and what it represents. And then, of course, we need to support and we need to defend what we've attached ourselves to...and that's what carries the heaviness aspect of it.

And the other things that come into play is resistance. You know, one of the things we can look at is that when we resist things we create struggle. And through struggle we create going into sacrifice mode.

The thing is, it's not for us to resist anything any longer. That is not natural for us. It's about allowing whatever needs to come through us, whatever needs to change or shift within ourselves, just to be.

Change is not about resisting. Change is about being fluid and allowing it to happen. And that's where we're going to. We're going through major changes at such a massive rate at this time, that the less we resist, the less we try to hold on to, the less we stop identifying with, the less we get caught up in fear around it and let it go, the more quickly the process works.

And, yes, even if we're going through all this stuff, we are still learning from it. But we don't have to keep repeating the lesson over and over and over again. It's about just allowing it to be...just letting it be...flowing right through us.

With any form of change (for example, we're going to change schools, we're going to change jobs, we're changing something in our life, we're changing a relationship, or changing the direction of our life, a career path) whatever it might be, whatever we're changing, there's always this automatic program that comes in, "Oh my God, am I going to be able to do it? Is this going to be tough on me? Is this going to be (this, this and this)." But this, again, is just part of the stories, part of the programs that we've been playing with.

But, realistically, our true nature is, "Wow! Another opportunity! Something different! Something that gives me the opportunity to go to another area of play to experience something different."

You know, we ARE "change" itself. Our natural state about change. Our natural state is unlimited. Our natural state is always playing with new levels of experience, achieving higher consciousness, achieving higher levels of ourselves. That's our natural state.

Our natural state is never being attached to anything and not creating a pattern that we can't break out of or a pattern that we create a sense of security with. Because "security" is another form again of survival. Why would we attach to any form of security, if survival wasn't in play?

So you see, all of this is part of what the change is all about...stepping out of all survival, all sacrifice, all struggle.

Because, realistically, there's nothing to struggle with. The Beings that we are, the Creators that we are, we are here to play with everything that is. And we create and play with whatever we choose, moment by moment. There is nothing to struggle against.

Our struggle is our own resistance. Most of our struggle is the "new" us coming through...which is basically our soul's enlightenment unveiling our Pure Potentiality, our experience of Who We Truly Are...coming through our mind construct program (which is our ego) which is holding onto the past. That's our biggest struggle!

The biggest struggle that we have is us!!! It is ourselves! It is our soul wanting to move forward and our mind saying, "We can't move forward because this is all we know and we need to hold to this because we are now playing with security, we are playing with survival, we are playing with the fact that if things change I don't have control over it because it's the unknown. And the unknown is scary. The unknown means, "Oh my God, I don't have the foundation, I don't have the history, I don't know what it's going to look like." So what happens? Survival. "Am I going to survive? Am I going to be able, one way or another, to make this change and still be in a sense where I survive, where I can still exist?"

And you have to look at it: The biggest survival program is in the ego mind. You see, the ego mind realizes that the programs that it's played with, the influence, the power, the acknowledgment and everything that the ego mind has been given and has had the opportunity to achieve within itself, is now needing to surrender.

Because as we are shifting away from our ego mind and going into our heart center (which is our soul). As we do that, our ego mind sees it as, "Oh my God, there goes me! I'm not going to be in charge any longer. I'm not going to be needed. Oh my God, I'm not going to survive!" That is the biggest one for survival itself. And what does it do? It creates struggle. And it will sacrifice a lot of opportunities for it.

And that's where the biggest struggle, the biggest battle, occurs: between your True Essence and the essence that was created through a mind construct as a pattern of belief systems that we are our stories, we are our "outside world," we are whatever we've attached to. That is the biggest part!

So once we understand all of this as we are taking this in right now (because all of this is creating a shift within ourselves), we are choosing deep inside, at all levels, to let go of that. To let go of survival. To let go of sacrifice. To let go of struggling.

Because none of it is our natural design. And not only is not our natural design, but it is something that has limited our experience of growth, our experiencing of adventure, our experiencing of achieving higher potentialities of ourselves, and to be able to take huge steps, great movements in one lifetime. And this is the reason that it has taken so many lives to take just little baby steps. But now we are changing all of that.

So the biggest lesson that we are dealing with right now is stepping outside of survival, sacrifice and struggle. That's the huge lesson in there. That's the part that's going to open the floodgates for us to really flow through quickly. Survival being the biggest one; letting that one go.

And that's the opening that we are going to play with this evening (with the clearing). And that is deep and does go back a long, long time.

And when you really look at it, our world is reflecting that over and over and over again. Because when you look at the media, you look at everything....even a commercial that tells you what to wear, what laundry soap (or whatever it is)...it's all survival based. Because if you don't do it right, you're going to be judged, you're not going to be loved, and then, of course, survival kicks in.

Interesting how that all plays out! For us to be accepted or loved is still part of survival! It seems like, "If nobody loves me, then I can't be here. I can't experience life. I won't be of any value whatsoever. And then what's my purpose in being here?"

So the world right now is reflecting this fully and completely and that's what keeps us from making the change.

But the changes are being made anyway. It's just that if we want to free it and make it move quickly, we need to step outside of that.

Because, realistically, the moment we have the Oneness connection, the moment we start seeing each one of us as part of us, including nature and everything else around us, that dissolves. Because then you can see the support mechanisms that we've created within ourselves and all aspects of it that is all of it.

You know, it's not...when we look at it...let's look at the two sides of it. Here we are creating a world and here we are we've come onto this planet, into this physicality...the moment we stepped into this physicality we've been living in survival, struggle and sacrifice. And that everything is against us and the only way we're going to make it is if we continue to struggle, to fight, to do whatever it is to be better, to do something so that we can actually "earn" our opportunity and stay here. And then if we work, we sacrifice at all levels. And what's the biggest thing? A child goes to school and learns that you need to sacrifice, you need to "study hard", you need to do your homework, you need to do this, you need to do that, and then you'll have a good job, and then one day you can have money, and you can have your home with all this stuff....and, again, it's all to do with survival, but it's all struggles to get there. And you need to sacrifice, you need to give up your free time, you need to give up your freedom and you need to "buckle down," you need to put your "head in the books," you need to learn things that others don't so that you can be "better" than they are, so that you can have something that they don't have, so that you can flourish in one way...which again, all has to do with survival when you look at all of that.

But, meanwhile, when you've seen the truth of what really is: You've come onto the planet which is here to complement your journey. Each one of us is to complement one another through their journey. Every part of nature, including the galaxy and the universe and everything else is here and is designed to allow and complement this experience.

And this experience is one isolated experience among trillions of other experiences that we could have.

Big polarity!!! Big difference!

So that's what we're shifting from. From coming here and trying to make it and survive and whatever else, and getting caught up with all of that...to coming here and really being free to experience life fully and completely in all aspects of it and not having to play with any more of that any longer.

So we are shifting from a 10,000-year-old modality program to our natural design from Day 1, when we designed this human physicality with this planet we call Earth in this perfect center of the galaxy that we're playing with right now that is to be the Ultimate Experiment, the Ultimate Garden of Eden (if you want to call it that) with the Ultimate Physicalities.

It doesn't reflect that right now, but that's what's changing within ourselves. What we've been reflecting is the old programs that we've agreed to take on all these many years.

But all of that is changing.

I could go on longer, but did you have anything to add, Antonia?

Antonia

As you said, this could be an entire event on its own because it is very, very deep rooted. And I think, as you've gone over everything, I know that even for me, in my life, as you were speaking, I could see certain areas in my life where I feel like, "Ouch! There's still some survival stuff playing out there."

And I think right now a lot of people are experiencing very accentuated emotions of survival. And I think it's just time to get really, really, really deep.
